

State approves credits for Technical College

The Labor Technical College, the training center for the New York City District Council of Carpenters, announced that it has received approval by the National Program on Noncollegiate Sponsored Instruction (NPONSI) - New York State Board of Regents to offer college credits equivalent to one full year of education.

Now, tradespeople attending the college have the opportunity to earn up to 30 credits in both the carpentry and millwright apprenticeship programs.

The Labor Technical College also works in conjunction with SUNY Empire State College, to offer an additional 34 credits, allowing for the completion of an Associate Degree of Science in Labor and Construction Studies on-site. The Labor Technical College is currently in the process of creating similar programs with other New York colleges in efforts to offer greater opportunity for the construction education community at large.

To register for journey level skill advancement courses at the Labor Technical College, members of the New York City District Council of Carpenters can call 212-727-2224.
